

JEAN DAVIA

February 2, 2012

I worked at Monsanto from 1973-1979 and then General Instrument until 1980. During this time I worked in the Marketing Communications Dept. as assistant and then manager of the department.

In 1980 I left GI for Intel Corp where I stayed for 22 years. At Intel, I continued in Marketing & Communications serving in a variety of positions in Corporate and several site locations. In Santa Clara I worked as Components Group Mgr. and completed the nat'l Certified Business Communicator (C.B.C.) program. My corporate positions included Corp Sales Promotion Mgr., Corp Advertising Mgr. and Corp ID Mgr. creating the new Intel logo program and ID training.

After that, I left the Bay Area to take a transfer to Folsom, CA to set up and manage the new Marcom dept at our newest location. I was delighted to have the opportunity then to work in the Munich, Germany office as Communications Mgr. before accepting a final transfer to Chandler, AZ where I managed Tech Pubs dept., served as Internet Marketing Mgr. and Senior Web Program Mgr. This transfer allowed me to move to where my family was.

I am happy to say I am now an official Intel retiree! I spend my time at the gym (to make up for all those desk jobs); doing charity work such as Feed Our Starving Children; researching family genealogy; and traveling with friends and family.

Oh, and to satisfy my lifelong baseball obsession, I am a season-ticket holder with the Arizona Diamondbacks. Go team!
