

KEN & MARGO HEBERLING

April 17, 2012

While working at Monsanto, Ken and I married. He was the hotshot on a motorcycle and I was the long legged one in hot pants. (I'm sure you can picture that now!) Ken spent his time after Monsanto in small companies, many of which were started by old Monsanto workmates. His last stint was at Litton Applied Technology, where he worked for 11 years as a production supervisor. I left Monsanto, after the birth of our first daughter Wendy. I then worked for American MicroSystems for about 4 years, until our second daughter, Jenny, was born.

Then life just happened. Ken and I lived in Milpitas for almost 18 years before we made the move to Montana. Ken's family was here and we decided our kids should be raised in a less hectic environment. So we purchased Dillon Dairy Products and bought ourselves a job! (No cows involved. It's a dairy delivery service) Ken and I ran the dairy by ourselves for a few years before I went to work at the University of Montana Western. Currently Dillon Dairy Products has 3 employees and puts thousands of miles on delivery trucks all over the area.

I have been at Montana Western for going on 18 years. I am an Academic Advisor giving advice to help students navigate the university system. Ken says it's silly they pay me to give advice, because I give it to him for free! We now have 2 sons-in-law, 3 grandkids and all their families living within blocks of us. I no longer wear hot pants, but Ken and I still ride a motorcycle. Ken is contemplating retirement, and I have a few more years left to work. If anyone is in the market for a life change and is interested in owning a dairy delivery service, give Ken a call!
